CLLRA focuses on understanding the labour policy paradigm from an interdisciplinary pedagogical framework and conversing with social realities to undertake meaningful advocacy and outreach initiatives.

About the Research Project:

This ICSSR Approved Major Research Project aims to study the status of live-in domestic workers in two cities, Delhi and Bangalore. The study tries to inquire into the employment agreements/contractual documents between the placement agency/service provider and the workers and between the workers and the employers, to understand the necessity of standardization of employment agreement to regulate this sector. The vulnerability of live-in domestic workers is both at the entry point (during procurement), at the hands of the placement agencies/service providers and at the end point, at the mercy of the employers (during employment). This is an empirical project to inquire whether there exists any sort of formal document to regulate work and relationship in the sector. This question helps us to explore various forms of contractual documents/employment agreements between the three stakeholders mentioned above.

Responsibilities:

- A. Creating a repository of trade unions, workers' associations, and helplines for domestic workers in Bangalore
